In an impressive speech, Mr. Jai Prakash Agarwal described the bold measures taken by both Jawaharlal Nehru and Indira Gandhi, closely associating with the Soviet/Russian leadership, towards achieving economic development, universal brotherhood, disarmament, and global peace. The significant contributions made by these illustrious leaders made India proud and transformed it to be a country to reckon with by world nations in different international forums. Referring to the first visit of Jawaharlal Nehru, accompanied by Indira Gandhi, to the erstwhile Soviet Union as an epoch-making event in world history, he appreciated the initiative of Jawaharlal Nehru in launching the “Friends of the Soviet Union” in the early ‘40s. He also related the establishment of Russian-Indian diplomatic relationship before the advent of Indian independence to the great vision of Jawaharlal Nehru. Mr. Karmalito aptly appreciated the foresight and fortitude of Indira Gandhi in signing the historic Indo-Soviet Treaty of Peace, Friendship and Cooperation in 1971. He also made an over-all view of ambitious economic projects and joint space programmes during the premiership of these distinguished Indian leaders.
