On May 29, Deputy Foreign Minister and Special Presidential Representative for the Middle East and Africa Mikhail Bogdanov received a delegation of the Kurdish National Council headed by chairman Saud al-Mulla.

There was a thorough exchange of views on the current situation in Syria, focusing on the task of achieving a prompt political settlement of the Syrian crisis on the basis of UN Security Council Resolution 2254 and the outcome of the Syrian National Dialogue Congress in Sochi.

Russia's principled position on the need for Syrian Kurds to participate in shaping the future of Syria, along with the country's other ethno-religious population groups, was affirmed.
