

Dmitry Medvedev took part in the Fourth BRICS Summit in New Delhi.

The Fourth BRICS Summit has concluded in New Delhi. The leaders of Brazil, Russia, India, China and South Africa taking part in the Summit exchanged views on the situation in the global economy, reforms of global management institutions, international stability and security issues.

Delhi Declaration was published following the Summit. The General Agreement on Granting Loans in National Currencies as Part of the Mechanism of the BRICS States' Inter-bank Cooperation and the Multilateral Letter of Credit Agreement were signed in the presence of the heads of BRICS development banks.

In addition, the document The Economies of the BRICS: A Report on Brazil, Russia, India, China and South Africa was submitted for consideration by the BRICS Summit participants.

On the sidelines of the Summit, President Medvedev held meetings with President of South Africa Jacob Zuma, President of the People's Republic of China Hu Jintao, President of Brazil Dilma Rousseff, and Prime Minister of India Manmohan Singh.

Dmitry Medvedev and Manmohan Singh reviewed the progress made in implementing existing agreements and outlined the development prospects for Russian-Indian cooperation.

Dmitry Medvedev also received honorary Doctor of Philosophy degree from Jawaharlal Nehru University.
